According to the case external trends that managers at kahl's deal with are addressing the needs of consumers as they relate to the global fation world. Another external trend that management encountered are identifying their toyet demographic and localing physical afore location to be accordible for them. Managers must ensure that the tayet market is the great before they begin, to build a branch store.

Marketing stategy: and products might not appeal to always demographics and would cause the company lost money, effort and fine. So establishing that there is a demographic in a specific are that much the is a demographic in a specific are that much the market target within is an essentially meets the market target within is an essentially importance piece of information of upper management.

if I was a manager at a local Kahl's ofere the types of external information that I would want and award and technological are demographics and technological enformation. Iterrity he demographic information is with contemes in because the need for counciting with contemes is because the need for counciting with contemes is because the need for counciting with contemes is contenur base and increase refertion. This connection cannot be if the companies target market isn't clearly defined. Though there is no one category that everyone in the target nursely will fit into, Kohl's needs to define it market not me just on a ground level, but an microscopic level.

In the uniromatal uncertainty matrix feall's would feel under the dynamic and complex all. The season why 4 placed the company within this cell is mainly because of the industry. The description in cell 4 states that a company fall into this cell for these reasons, the envisonment is contineusly Changing, and the industry is one that requires in-depth information about the factors that împart the internal environment. Managers can manage the environmental uncertainities by first acknowledging, second continuing to research and build customer reelation with its great wartet, and finally monitoring competition.

19 The most important stakeholders at Kohl's are the customers. The concerns and issues that we rderant to them from mulbiple things. Value, culture, traditions, price, even the media's project of what's hot and what's not affect them, I know that their concurs are important to the consumers because when a person shaps they don't just aimlers walk around a store picking up random items. Although wany consumers brown the the store they ideally and realistically pick. up things that attract them for one verson or another. There reason eventually stem back to their culture. personality, price, and the media.
